Found Dead On The Beach

Coroner Snyder was called over to the west coast Prince of Wales Island last Friday to investigate the finding of the body of Peter Taube on Ore Island. From the position of the body and its surroundings, it was concluded that the deceased had either died of exposure or had been drowned while lying on the beach, the result of a fall caused by his foot becoming in the limbs of a fallen tree. The report that he had been shot in the back turned out to be entirely without foundation.

To My Friends

It is with the utmost regret that owing to illhealth I am compelled to sever my connections with Wrangell and those who with me had thrown in their lot with me within her borders, and at this time I desire to thank them all for their patronage and friendship in the years that are gone.

Bruno Greif.

A Pair of Weddings

Little Dan Cupid scored twice this last week in the way of matrimony.

Wednesday Roy Cole and Miss Luella Landon were married and a dancing party given in their honor that evening at the Wrangell Hotel. Mrs. Cole has made her home until recently in Tacoma, and is the sister-in-law of Harry Swift.

George Skelton and Miss Bertha Lemieux were married Thursday by Rev. Clark.

Bruno Greif Sells Out

After having shared in the town life of Wrangell for over thirteen years, doing his part as a business man and a citizen, Bruno Greif has disposed of his interests here to A. Lemieux, and was a passenger for the south on the Jefferson. The price paid was $12,500, and the property transferred constituted all the Greif holdings here, with the exception of his interests in the Redmen's hall.

Arrange Pipe Lease

With the assistance of Attorney Barnhill, the Town Council at a special session, Wednesday evening, February 9, entered into a contract with those citizens who had advanced the cash to buy the pipe for the water system. As everybody in the town is aware, the treasury didn't contain money enough to finance the water system so it was decided by the council to negotiate a deal with several citizens for them to take care of the difference. This was done, and a fund of $3500.00 was raised as follows: P. C. McCormack, $750, J. G. Grant, $750, P. C. Patenaude, $700, F. Matheson, $400, Donald Sinclair, $200, and Charles Bryant, $200. The statute is such that a town in Alaska may not create any indebtedness more than it can handle within the year, so the agreement was entered into between the council and the above mentioned citizens whereby the pipe remains the property of those paying for it, the town paying them $350 per year rental for the pipe and having the right to purchase any or all of it at any time at the cost price.

DELINQUENT TAX SALE NOTICE

Notice is hereby given that in pursuance of Section 20 of Ordinance No. 12 of the town of Wrangell, Alaska, duly passed and approved on the 4th day of August, 1904, providing for the sale of property to satisfy assessments against the same in said town, where the taxes have become delinquent, I will, at the hour of 1 o'clock p. m., on MONDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1910 in front of my place of business in said town, offer for sale and sell at public auction, to the highest and best bidder (or bidders) for cash in hand on day of sale, the following described lots, parts of lots, buildings and other property described in this notice to satisfy the unpaid taxes on same for the year 1909.

A. T. Bennett, Block 19,
Lot 10, Tract No. 19 $ 1.50
Jake Johnson, Block 3 Lot 7 3.12
John E. Sales, Tract 7 2.00
M. C. Marshall, House on
Waterfront 2.50
Dated at Wrangell, Alaska, this 21th day of January, 1910.

L. C. PATENAUDE,
Treasurer and ex-officio tax collector of the town of Wrangell, Alaska.

Card of Thanks

Those who were interested in getting up the farewell party in honor of Miss Koebler last week have asked The Sentinel to express their thanks to the many who so generously helped to make the affair the fine success it was. To the ladies especially do they feel under obligations for the excellence of the refreshments they contributed on such short notice.

Notice

To claimants of land in Wrangell townsite. Time in which to file applications for deeds is extended thirty days from the date of this notice, after which allotments will be made or rejected on all applications on file, and deeds issued on payment of assessments. Contest cases will then be heard, and a report made of all unoccupied lands; lands allotted; assessments remaining unpaid; and lands occupied and not applied for. When the Commissioner of the General Land Office will appoint a time for, and the conditions under which the lands still remaining vacant will be sold at public auction.

Wrangell Alaska, Feb. 17, 1910,
Maacus Fayette Inman,
Townsite Trustee.

Steamer Yucatan Sinks

While running along Icy Straits Wednesday afternoon in a blinding snowstorm, the steamer Yucatan struck an ice berg injuring her so badly that she went down in eight minutes. All the passengers and crew escaped safely to the shore landing at Mud Bay near Hoonah. The vessel, the third one the Alaska Steamship Co. has lost within the last six months, lies in six fathoms of water and will probably be a total loss.

Fur Men Furnish Sport

The passengers on the last trip of the Cottage were treated to an exciting race at every stop of the boat. Louis Levy was on board and so was W. Wernecke, a Seattle fur dealer. As the steamer was tied up at each town the two men lined up near the gang plank and each struck the wharf just about the same time it did, and off they would go, neck and neck. The honors were about even, as sometimes one would make the bigger haul of furs, and then the other.

A CREDITABLE SHOWING

Wrangell has ample cause for self congratulation as shown by the delinquent tax list printed on another page of the Sentinel. The sum total of all the delinquent taxes of the town for the year 1909 amounts to just $9.12. Of course we realize that Wrangell's tax roll are not the largest in the district, but it were safe to say that there is not another town in the district which can show such a proportionately small delinquent list.

Wrangellites are but mortal they have their failings, great or small, just as other townsfolk have but they cannot be accused of being short on civic pride. The brevity of the delinquent tax list shows this, and if there is need for further proof just look at the way they came forward this last fall and furnished the wherewithall to put the water system in. There is little need of further proof to show that they are always there when it comes to stepping forward and making a good showing.

MADE SOME MONEY

From the seventh annual statement of the Alaska Packers Association, which is just at hand, it is found the association last year packed 1,338,254 cases of salmon and put up 6,537 barrels of salt salmon, an increase of 177,777 cases and a decrease of 2,798 barrels over the pack of 1908. The company's pack was divided as follows:—Sockeye, 159,942 cases; Red, 857,232 cases; Kings, 27,777 cases; Cohoes, 16,860 cases; pink, 264,759 cases; chums, 13,657 cases.

The company operated four canneries in Alaska and three in Puget Sound. The present appraised value of which is placed at $4,357,486.40 or $27,397,330. Two barks, the Star of Holland and the Star of Greenland, were purchased during the year at an expense of $122,500. The association now owns nine ships, nine barks, one barkentine, two schooners, fifty-nine steamer and launches; a total of eighty vessels.

During 1909 from the 40,320,000 red salmon eggs taken in 1908, at the Karluk salmon hatchery, 36,755,000 fry were liberated and 45,888,000 red salmon eggs taken. From the 24,465,000 red salmon eggs taken at the Fortman hatchery in 1908, 22,785,000 fry were liberated and 53,340,000 red salmon eggs were taken. The report states that the association's profits for the year were $779,728. A dividend of $1.50 per share on the capital stock was declared, payable February 10.

Delegate Wickersham in a committee room meeting at Washington, said that President Taft, President Roosevelt, Governor Loggatt and Major Richardson were Guggenheim agents. The delegate was promptly called down by Senator Beveridge and the remarks stricken from the record.

The senate has passed the Nelson bill making Alaska a special lighthouse district by itself, and is disposed to consider favorably all the bills which have been introduced to increase the aids to navigation in the waters of the territory. There is some fear, however, that when the house comes to act, it will refuse to make as liberal appropriations as are asked. The house is determined to exercise a policy of economy at the present session, and territories which have no votes on the floor are easy victims of economical notions.—Ex.

The accumulation of snow on the roofs of some of the buildings at Cordova had caused some of them to give way beneath the weight.

Here And There In

The North

A wolf was killed recently just outside the limits of Ketchikan.

The Ellamar copper mine has resumed shipments of ore to the Tacoma smelter.

The Tanana Valley railroad has placed an order in the East for six electric motor cars.

A native lost his life in a snow slide near Haines last week and three others had narrow escapes.

James A. Moore, of Seattle, has purchased the "Magnosite" mines in Atlin. The price was $75,000.

At Nome a little Eskimo child was rescued from the surf by a Newfoundland dog and carried to a place of safety.

Charles E. Peabody, president of the Alaska Steamship Co., is back at Seattle after a trip to the east. He refuses to divulge the results of his visit.

An Iowa paper says it is gratifying to Alaskans to know that one half of the available land in the United States is situated in the territory where they have made their home.

A special citizens' committee of Dawson is hustling hard getting data to lay before the Canadian railway Commission seeking a reduction of White Pass freight rates.

Manager G. C. Hazelett, of the Cordova Light and Power company has returned from the states with a steam power plant, which will be installed to help out the water power which fails in the extreme cold weather.

Contractor M. J. Heney, of the Copper River railroad, says that it is now certain that the road will be completed to the Bonanza copper mines early in the fall of this year. From there extensions will be made as the development of the country warrents.

Recent reports brought to Fairbanks from the Iditarod indicate that that section is a false alarm, the pay rarely running more than 6 cents to the pan. On the other hand a large part of the travel promises to be diverted to the Koyukuk by reports of pans found there running as high as $100.

all under the terms of your deal with Emma, and you have been paid in full. Of course if you repent of the bargain Captain Williams, as a party to the contract, may be induced to cancel the receipt and leave the matter as it was earlier in the evening. I will get him on the phone in a jiffy if you say so."

A smile so sickly, so distorted with baffled rage, that it became a hyena-like grimace, flickered on Brooks' visage.

"I see," he said. "You've all turned against me now you think I'm down. Well, as you like. Consider I've been paid in full. I'm agreeable. I've done nothing but slave for her for five years and been kept down by her. I didn't send her away; but, seeing she's going against my wishes, she'll stay gone. It lets me out. In future I'll only have myself to think of, and you bet I'm going to do it."

"That's up to you," retorted Smith sententiously.

Without saying good night he turned and left the room to rejoin Emma, who was waiting for him at the bottom of the elevator shaft.

CHAPTER XVIII.

WASHED with rain, the stars, "forgetmenots of the angels," blinked limpidly from the sky of violet blue. The moonlight flooded the country, percolated in soft, refulgent cascades through the spruces and hemlocks and traced with its witchery weird arabesques in the glades.

On the road that ribboned through the forest and up from the lake walked Emma Brooks and her sister Beth, the latter grumbling.

"You are the queerest girl," she complained. "No one but you would think of coming out in such weather—not a soul. My shoes are so heavy with mud I can hardly lift my feet."

"Oh, I just had to! I love it," replied Emma. "I simply could not stay indoors. I know now what a bird must feel like when it is caged. You must humor me, little sister. I have been born again—awakened to a new life. My soul, snatched from the swirl-fire of sordidness, of sorrow, of base-ness, that seared it, must expand or burst. My life for so long was depressed in the fog, like that we came up through today to emerge at last into the brightness of the mountain tops. It is hard to realize that I have left all this behind and am free in the light."

"You certainly have had a hard time of it with that beast," admitted Beth, stopping to take breath.

"Listen!" went on Emma. "Don't you love that chorus of the frogs and the grasshoppers? I think there is something weirdly exquisite in these noises of the night that we do not hear in the city, that I have not heard for ages and ages. Oh, I wish the woods here were full of the old world nightingales that the poets say 'feed the heart of the night with fire, satiate the hungry dark with melody; don't you? And don't you love this incense of the soaked earth and its verdure? It lifts me to the clouds there that drift like silver snow past the moon."

She laughed aloud in her light heartedness, and the joyous peal went echoing through the wood.

"Lor', Emma, how you talk!" said Beth, marveling at her sister's exaltation, which she did not understand. They trudged on and upward in silence through the mud, past cheerful lights that glowed through windows of bungalows and cottages among the trees, until they came to a miniature dwelling ensconced in a bower of laurels.

At the door stood Mrs. Harris. She was displeased.

"For goodness' sake! Where have you been?" she exclaimed as the girls entered. "I began to think you had fallen into the lake or off a rock or that some other dreadful thing had happened to you and was scared to death."

"Emma," said Beth, dropping into a chair, "is impossible. She insisted on walking right to the lake, though the roads were awful and ankle deep in mud so sticky that I thought I'd have to leave my rubbers in it. Don't forget, too, that's all uphill coming back."

"Oh, I never enjoyed a walk so in my life!" declared Emma. "It was magnificent! I couldn't have slept. I couldn't have stayed in bed, if I hadn't taken it."

But Mrs. Harris refused to be mollified.

"And I won't be able to sleep because you've made me so nervous," she complained.

Emma went to her, put her arm about her and kissed her.

"Don't be cross, mother," she pleaded. "You know this is my first sniff of real country for a century, and I have never been in the Catskills before and therefore never so near heaven. I am a little girl again, as full of childish joy as I used to be when father took us on those trips which now seem like a dream, they were so long ago."

"If your father hadn't been so 'easy' we'd be owning a handsome cottage at one of the fashionable places in the Adirondacks instead of hiring a mean little bungalow here," lamented Mrs. Harris. "No fashionable people ever come here, and one has to be so particular. But what is one to do? One can't remain in New York in the dog days."

"For me, I'm sick and tired of the mountains," announced Beth. "I'd like to go to Newport, where we'd stand a chance of meeting somebody and where anyhow we'd be able to see real society people."

"Bother society!" said Emma happily.

Both her mother and Beth looked shocked.

"Emma, how can you say such a thing?" reproved Mrs. Harris, enveloping herself in an air of loftiness. "I hope you have not allowed yourself to be influenced by the anarchistic vapors of your—of that unspeakable person whose name is not to be mentioned."

"I've read somewhere that fine society is only a self protection against the vulgarities of the street and the tavern," chirped Beth primly.

"That all depends on how you define 'fine society,'" said Emma.

"I mean the society of wealth, the Four Hundred, of course. I pray every night that I may marry a duke or a count."

"Beth has such elevated ideas!" commented her mother admiringly.

"Such petitions," observed Emma, becoming grave, "never reach the mercy seat. It is said that at midnight every New Year's eve, when the bells of the churches ring out the dying year, there issue from the bell-towers streams of vapory spirits with distracted, terrified faces, their hands clasped to their ears. They are the prayers that never rose any higher, prayers of worshippers in the churches who repeated them mechanically, as they are accustomed to do every Sunday, without realization of the significance of the words they utter; prayers muttered by those whose thoughts were on other things; prayers of the hypocrite; prayers of the humbug; supplications to the most high for the preposterous and the impossible; prayers of those who do not practice what they preach; prayers of those who do those things which they ought not to do and leave undone those things which they ought to do and think their weekly gift confession of it and their obolus in the collection plate absolve them. With the jangling and clanging of the bells they are borne by the winds over mountain and sea and are lost forever in the eternal void between the worlds. All such prayers wherever uttered must share this fate."

By this time Mrs. Harris was agape, too astonished to utter a word.

"Gracious, Emma!" gasped Beth. "You talk like a book. I don't know what's come over you."

"It is my new birth. I told you it was as though I had been born again. I hope you will marry a duke or a count if you want to, Beth. As a rule, I believe they are real men, every whit as worthy as good men who don't bear this distinction of title. Still, the field is necessarily restricted, and you mustn't forget that there are other noble men as distinguished from noblemen—men of sterling value, who ring true under every test."

"Like—like Jimsy," ventured Beth with a dubious air, casting about and on the spur of the moment thinking of none other she knew who would fit the description.

"Like Jimsy," assented Emma emphatically.

"But he's so ungrammatical, so—er—shy on education, besides which he hasn't any money," objected Mrs. Harris.

"None to speak of," seconded Beth, pursing her lips deprecatingly.

"Aside from that, though," conceded Mrs. Harris, "I must say Jimsy's a real good man and most obliging. He can't help his upbringing."

"How about Captain Williams?" questioned Emma. "How would you class him?"

"My dear," answered her mother, "you wouldn't put him in the same class with Jimsy—I mean socially. He's so rich! I wouldn't be surprised if he were several times a millionaire. Remember, he has two automobiles. And the handsome way he treated you! Why, he crossed out the $16,000 that abomination stole as though it were a matter of 16 cents."

"A man's true wealth is the good he does in this world, mother, according to Mohammed."

"That is how it may have appeared to that foreign prophet in the year 1," retorted Mrs. Harris with a tone of finality, "but in this age of horse sense in the United States a million dollars in the bank is the real standard of wealth. With money you can do everything. If you have plenty of it you can do plenty of good, and everybody else will sit on the fence and clap, but if you haven't any you are no good to yourself, can do no good to others, and everybody else will get down from the fence to kick you."

Left to his own devices, Brooks took a survey of the position in which he found himself, and his conclusion was not without gratification to him. The clean "bill of health" she had been the means of obtaining for him from Captain Williams had in fact left at his free disposal as his own property several hundred dollars from his stealings and from his last "plunge" on the horses, which had been a winning one. Then there was the furniture. The piano was supposed to be Emma's, and he felt sure she would send for it, but he had no intention of surrendering it. Not one stick, not one penny, would she ever get out of him after the way in which she had treated him. The very day after her departure he sold the instrument to the piano house front which it had been purchased.

Within three days he had removed from the hotel where they had lived in state for such a brief period and transferred such furniture as he required to one room in a bachelor apartment house. The rest he disposed of for cash. He was a bachelor again to all intents and purposes, and he resolved to enjoy his liberty to the full. He had had enough of married life, with its cares and the discipline of restraint it imposed. Once more he was "one of the boys." To make his position unmistakable and discourage any disposition on his wife's part to return to him he forwarded, care of her mother, her portrait, that had been conspicuous on the parlor mantel, after taking it from the gilded frame in which it had stood. On the back of it he wrote a verse of an old song:

My wife she ran away from me
Some two or three weeks ago,
And now she wants to come back again,
But I tell her it's no use.
"Once bit twice shy" is my reply,
And if it was I again
Cats and dogs and murrals and frogs
I'd never have her back again.

There was no word of explanation beyond this insulting doggerel, and he was careful not to give his address. He chuckled as he put it in the letter box. At times he was a little uneasy lest she should seek to discover his whereabouts for the purpose of making a claim for support, but as the weeks wore on and nothing was heard from her he became reassured.

He had had little difficulty in procuring work, thanks to Captain Williams' note accepting his resignation,

NOTICE OF FINAL SETTLEMENT

Notice is hereby given that John Schuler, administrator of the estate of Amelia Schuler, deceased, has filed in the Probate Court of Wrangell Precinct, Alaska, his final account, and the Court has set February 15, 1910, as the day for hearing objections, and all persons having objection thereto, are cited to appear on that date, at one o'clock p. m. at the court house at Wrangell.

Dated December 14, 1909.
JOHN SCHULER
Administrator.

The report that O. P. Brown has retired from the management of the Pacific Coast and Norway Packing Co. at Petersburg turns out to be without foundation, as Mr. Brown is expected north on an early boat to take up his work at that place.

Pat Loftus, who was summoned rather late to sit on the present Grand Jury at Juneau, was excused when he appeared for duty Monday of last week.

Donald Sinclair, who was confined to his home with stomach trouble several days last week, is around again little the worse apparently for the attack. Mrs. Sinclair had better discontinue feeding him so well.

Mrs. Willoughby Clark and son came up on the last Jefferson to visit Wrangell friends.

The local Socialists feel better. For Tom Case is back on the job again.

Assistant United States Attorney "Bill" Barnhill was a Wrangell visitor on mill business for several days last week, returning to Juneau on the Jefferson.

There is every probability that all the Wrangell cases bound over to the Grand Jury will go over to the Ketchikan term of court. Rather hard on the prisoners, especially whom the grand jury will refuse to hold.

Schooner For Sale

The schooner Ragnhild is offered for sale at a reasonable figure. She is 36 feet long, with a beam of 11 ft. 6 inches, and a 9 h. p. Truscott engine. She is thoroughly equipped with sails, rigging, sidelights, anchors and cable, batteries and magneto, air, naptha and gasoline tanks, whistle, engine tools and cook stove, etc. She is to be seen near the local electric power house, and the price and other particulars can be learned from either Joe Ensley or Orval Palmer.

Washing and ironing, pressing, cleaning and plain sewing at Mrs. Wm. Lewis'.

Louis Levy, representing Joseph Ullmann, the big New York FUR buyer, will spend the winter in Southeastern Alaska, making frequent calls at Wrangell.

Patenaude carries the best in Cigars, Tobaccos, Pipes, and Smokers' supplies in general.

When in need of a tombstone for your departed one, write to the Juneau Marble works, James Hogan, proprietor, Juneau, Alaska. Designs and prices furnished on application

Fred C. Miles was a passenger on the Jefferson en route to San Francisco. He hopes to improve his health by the trip.

A meeting of fishermen and loggers is called for Saturday evening February 26, at St. Philips hall. If you are interested, attend it.

Remember the dance, Tuesday February 22, Washington's birthday, at Redmen's hall. Be there.

That old pipe of yours is fierce, better get a new one from Pat's.

The two Charleys, Brvant and Borch, are now in possession of the Jack Mantel saltery, getting ready for the coming season. The latter came up to town, Friday and reports close to seven feet of snow on the level.

Notice of Final Settlement

Notice is hereby given that I, John Thorndtsater, administrator of the estate of Erick Peterson, deceased, have filed in the Probate Court, Wrangell Precinct, Alaska, my final account, and the Court has set April 18th, 1910, as the day for hearing objections thereto. All persons are cited to appear on that date at two o'clock at the Courthouse, Wrangell, Alaska, and file their objections, if any, to said account.

Dated February 12, 1910.

John Thorndtsater,
